

Spring 2009

History of American Religion

History 396.102

This history colloquium is an introduction to the study of American religion from colonial times to the present. Through readings, films, and multimedia we will explore:

- the European roots of American religious forms
- revivalism as a cultural force in colonial and nineteenth-century America
- characteristics of some of America's major religious traditions
- the diversity of belief in American history and in present-day practice.

*This course will satisfy the LSA Upper-Level Writing Requirement (ULWR), and as such students will work with the professor to improve their writing skills.

*Enrollment limited to Jr. and/or Sr. History concentrators by departmental waitlist.

Professor John Recchiuti

Days: Mon/Wed
Time: 1:00-4:00 p.m.
Room: TBA
